Overview of the application of multilevel (random effects) models in longitudinal research, with examples from social research Particular focus on joint modelling of correlated processes using multilevel multivariate models, e.g. to adjust for selection bias in estimating effect of parental divorce on children's education Multilevel Models for Longitudinal Data Over the past twenty years multilevel modelling has become a standard approach in the analysis of clustered data (Goldstein, 2003). Longitudinal data are one example of a hierarchical structure, with repeated observations over time (at level 1) nested within individuals (level 2). Multilevel models for longitudinal data - LSE Research Online Multilevel models (also known as hierarchical linear models, linear mixed-effect model, mixed models, nested data models, random coefficient, random-effects models, random parameter models, or split-plot designs) are statistical models of parameters that vary at more than one level. An example could be a model of student performance that contains
